

In important ways, the financial system we have today is different from any financial system that has existed in the past.

Martin Wolf

□ Leading economist, Financial Times commentator, expert on globalization. □

Extremely effective speaker on global economics. Highly respected economist, award-winning journalist. Author of Fixing Global Finance and Why Globalization Works—a definitive statement of the case for market-based globalization. Rigorous thinking, deep insight, dazzlingly sharp delivery.

Associate Editor, Chief Economics Commentator, The Financial Times.

Ahead of the Curve

Leigh
Bureau Ltd

Phone +353.1.230.2322
Web www.LeighBureau.eu
EMail europe@LeighBureau.com

Associate Editor,
Chief Economics Commentator,
The Financial Times

Highlights

Martin Wolf is an extremely effective speaker on global economics, with unparalleled experience as both an economist and a journalist.

He is Associate Editor and Chief Economics Commentator at the Financial Times, London, writing a weekly column on the world economy and a fortnightly column on the UK.

He is a Forum Fellow at the World Economic Forum in Davos, Switzerland, where he has served as a panel moderator.

Martin was a senior economist for ten years at the World Bank's division of international trade, was Director of Studies at the Trade Policy Research Centre, London, and has advised governments and international organizations on trade and economic integration.

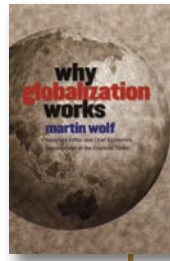

Martin is the author of numerous articles and several books on global economics and political economy, including, Why Globalization Works.

His new book, Fixing Global Finance: How to Curb Financial Crises in the 21st Century, describes how the current financial crisis developed and how we can ensure global financial stability in the future.

Martin has won several prestigious awards for his journalism, including CBE (Commander of the British Empire) in 2000 "for services to financial journalism" and the Decade of Excellence Award at the 2003 Business Journalists of the Year Awards.

He has a well-deserved reputation for rigorous thinking, deep insight and dazzlingly sharp delivery.

We have treated the global commons as if they were free. Self-evidently, they are not.

Fixing Global Finance

□ The causes and cures of global financial crises, including the current one. □

In Fixing Global Finance, Martin Wolf explains why global imbalances cause financial crises—including the one ravaging the globe right now—and he outlines the steps for ending this destructive cycle. Reviewing the global financial crises since 1980, he reveals their underlying patterns and argues that global economic security depends on emerging economies and their ability to develop robust financial systems based on domestic currencies. Sharply and clearly argued, Wolf's prescription illustrates why he has been described as "the world's preeminent financial journalist."

Credentials

- □ Chief economics commentator, Financial Times
- □ Visiting fellow, Nuffield College, Oxford University
- □ Honorary fellow, Oxford Institute for Economic Policy (Oxonia)
- □ Special professor, University of Nottingham.
- □ Director of Studies, Trade Policy Research Centre, London
- □ Forum fellow, World Economic Forum in Davos
- □ Former Senior Economist, World Bank
- □ Doctor of Science (Economics), London University, honoris causa, by the London School of Economics

Leigh
Bureau Ltd